

Recommended:
Montana in the hunt
... for game
wardens

Recommended:
Barack Obama joins
Open Government Partnership for group photo

Recommended: Fly over the southern lights in the space station

Recommended:
Photographer
captures a different side of Ramallah

Conversations sparked by photojournalism. For even more great images, follow us on Twitter.

↓ About this blog ↓ Archives

Receive e-mail updates  Subscribe to RSS

Leave your comment below

Recommend 1

11

5

2
hours ago

Asian Carp tacos? Illinois launches anti-hunger program

Nam Y. Huh / AP

Chef Tim Creehan, right, and chef Philippe Parola prepare food at Christ the King Jesuit College Preparatory High School on Thursday, Sept. 22, 2011, in Chicago. Launch of a campaign by the Illinois Department of Natural Resources to try and change the fish's image and teach people how to cook the ultra-bony meat.

Nam Y. Huh / AP

Students line up for the taste of Asian carp at Christ the King Jesuit College Preparatory High School on Thursday, Sept. 22, 2011, in Chicago.

older

AP reports:

CHICAGO — Minced Asian carp tacos? How about spaghetti with carp sauce?

Illinois officials hope serving the invasive species on a plate is the creative solution to two big problems: controlling the plankton-gobbling carp from entering the Great Lakes and record numbers of people facing hunger. Full story.

Browse: illinois, asian-carp, anti-hunger

Most popular posts